Comparative Audit: Tata vs. Mahindra

Criteria	Tata	Mahindra
1. Social Strategy vs Digital Strategy	Tata has a fragmented social strategy. While it reflects the brand's heritage and values, the digital strategy lacks cohesive engagement approaches. The presence is strong on established social platforms but less effective in creating niche community engagement.	Mahindra's social strategy is integrated with a robust digital presence. Engages actively across diverse platforms, employing targeted campaigns that resonate with various demographics. Consistent brand voice strengthens presence and customer loyalty.
2. FGC vs UGC Analysis	Tata's online presence shows a high volume of FGC (Formal Generated Content) but suffers from a significantly greater volume of UGC (User Generated Content) which skews negative. This reflects potential dissatisfaction among consumers.	Mahindra benefits from a strong balance of both FGC and UGC. Positive UGC contributes favorable sentiment, fostering a community-driven brand environment. High engagement with customers generates authentic advocacy without significant negative backlash.
3. Crisis Maturity	Tata's response to crises has shown signs of maturity but can improve real-time engagement. The high volume of negative sentiment suggests underlying issues not adequately addressed through past crises. Engagement strategies need reevaluation to enhance resilience and recovery.	Mahindra displays a robust crisis management approach, with proactive communication practices in place. Their digital outreach allows for agile adjustments to strategy during crises, minimizing negative fallout and maintaining brand alignment.
4. Execu	- Intensively reevaluate social and digital strategy for unified engagement.	- Continue investment in integrated digital strategy focusing on UGC as a
